HEAVEN PHOTOGRAPHED BY HUBBLE TELESCOPE
"We found where God lives," says scientist

WASHINGTON — Just days after space shuttle astronauts repaired the Hubble Space Telescope in mid December, the giant lens focused on a star cluster at the edge of the universe — and photographed Heaven!

That's the word from author and researcher Marcia Mason, who quoted highly placed NASA insiders as having said that the telescope beamed hundreds of photos back to the command center at Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., on December 21.

The pictures clearly show a vast white city floating eerily in the blackness of space. And the expert quoted NASA sources as saying that the city is definitely Heaven "because life as we knew it couldn't possibly exist in icy, airless space."

"This is it — this is the proof we've been waiting for," Dr. Mason told reporters.

"Through an enormous stroke of luck, NASA aimed the Hubble Telescope at precisely the right place at precisely the right time to capture these images on film. I'm not particularly religious, but I don't doubt that somebody or something influenced the decision to aim the telescope at that particular area of space."

"Was that someone or something God Himself?" Given the vastness of the universe, and all the planets and stars, NASA could have targeted for study that would certainly appear to be the case.

NASA spokesmen declined to comment on the author's report, "pending further analysis of the photographs received on December 21."

In spite of official silence, agency insiders conceded that NASA "has discovered something that might alter the future of all mankind."

They also confirmed that President Bill Clinton and Vice President Al Gore have taken a keen personal interest in the photographs and have requested daily briefings. Dr. Mason said: "The Hubble Space Telescope was designed to photograph images as far away as the edge of the universe but a lens flaw prevented it from doing so until shuttle astronauts corrected the defect during a recent mission."

"When they finished their work, the telescope trained its enormous glass eye on the outer reaches of the universe. From what I understand, the first images it received were nothing more than kaleidoscopic bursts of color and light."

"No adjustments were made, and the focus sharpened. NASA analysts couldn't believe their eyes."

"After checking and re-checking the data, they concluded that the images were authentic. They also learned that the city was possibly inhabited by us as we know it."

"The only logical explanation was that the city was inhabited by the dead. As one of our sources put it, 'We live where God lives.'"

It has been rumored that the space agency has forwarded photographs to Pope John Paul II at his request. Dr. Mason, who obtained copies of a still photograph from her NASA sources, says the agency's next move "will most revealing."

"This is a chance NASA to come clean with the public and tell us everything it knows," she said.

[57] ABSTRACT

A real time illusion transmitter for transmitting three dimensional illusions of an object comprising a first parabolic mirror for producing a real image of an illuminated object, image detection means disposed in a position to receive said real image and adapted to generate video signals for transmission by cable or electromagnetic means, a second parabolic mirror located at a remote site and having associated therewith an image projector for producing an image from signals transmitted from said first parabolic mirror, said image projector projecting an image normal to the principle axis of the parabolic mirror to produce an illusion of the image when reflected from the parabolic mirror.
